

Professionalism and Commitment

The next generation

Nicola Garthwaite

Where I come from

Born and raised in rural Southland

Graduated University of Otago 2009

Worked in Southland Hospital 2yrs

Entered GPEP1 training programme

Wikipedia

Expert and specialised knowledge in field which one is practising professionally.

Excellent manual/practical and literary skills in relation to profession.

A high standard of professional ethics, behaviour and work activities while carrying out one's profession. The professional owes a higher duty to a client, often a privilege of confidentiality, as well as a duty not to abandon the client just because he or she may not be able to pay or remunerate the professional. Often the professional is required to put the interest of the client ahead of his own interests.

Reasonable work morale and motivation. Having interest and desire to do a job well as holding positive attitude towards the profession are important elements in attaining a high level of professionalism.

Appropriate treatment of relationships with colleagues. Consideration should be shown to elderly, junior or inexperienced colleagues, as well as those with special needs. An example must be set to perpetuate the attitude of one's business without doing it harm.

Graduation Oath

I will exercise my profession to the best of my knowledge and ability

I will respect the secrets which are confided in me and maintain the upmost respect for human life

I will hold in due respect the honourable traditions and obligations of the medical profession and will do nothing inconsistent there with.

I will work for the good of all persons whose health may be placed in my care and for the public weal.

Competence

- I will exercise my profession to the best of my knowledge and ability
- Expert and specialised knowledge in field which one is practising professionally.
- Excellent manual/practical and literary skills in relation to profession.
- Reasonable work morale and motivation. Having interest and desire to do a job well as holding positive attitude towards the profession are important elements in attaining a high level of professionalism.

Trust

- I will respect the secrets which are confided in me and maintain the upmost respect for human life
- A high standard of professional ethics, behaviour and work activities while carrying out one's profession. The professional owes a higher duty to a client, often a privilege of confidentiality, as well as a duty not to abandon the client just because he or she may not be able to pay or remunerate the professional. Often the professional is required to put the interest of the client ahead of his own interests.

Relationships

- I will hold in due respect the honourable traditions and obligations of the medical profession and will do nothing inconsistent there with.
- I will work for the good of all persons whose health may be placed in my care and for the public weal.
- Appropriate treatment of relationships with colleagues. Consideration should be shown to elderly, junior or inexperienced colleagues, as well as those with special needs. An example must be set to perpetuate the attitude of one's business without doing it harm.

Belonging

- An example must be set to perpetuate the attitude of one's business without doing it harm.
- I will hold in due respect the honourable traditions and obligations of the medical profession and will do nothing inconsistent there with.

Self Care

Commitment

Summary

- Competence
- trust
- respectful relationships
- courtesy
 - public action
 - awareness of our role
 - self care